For Better or Worse

Public Opinion of the New York Subway
And Construction of the Second Avenue Line
For Better or Worse

I have to get to Brooklyn when I live on the Upper East Side of Manhattan. What route should I take? The 6 to the F? Nah, the F takes too long on the weekends, and there are some pretty scary people on the F, not to sound ignorant. I’m not looking forward to taking the 4, 5, or 6 either. It is always filled to the brim with people. It seems no matter what time you take it, you cannot escape the crowd.

Waiting for the Second Avenue line is tedious and by the looks of it, it will not be finished until I’m in college. Is it even worth the wait? The constant blasting in the ground, the bus delays and the congestion on Second Avenue makes it difficult to even cross the street. What am I saying. Of course it is worth it. Would I rather deal with that or the utter congestion of the 4, 5, or 6? Missing several trains in the morning because it is almost impossible to get on one? Taking five minutes to even get out of the station? Taking alternate routes such as the C train which has been voted the worst train in the system for 4 years straight? Or the 4, 5, or 6 which has been known as the most congested in the city? Or the G, which has about three train cars and comes every twenty minutes? Hmph, I think I’ll wait.
Bibliography:

Information about second avenue subway:

http://www.mta.info/capital/future/avenue-subway.php

Subway congestion:

http://www.mta.info/nyct/facts/ffsubway.htm

Keaney, Shane March 28, 2012

http://www.visualnews.com/2012/03/28/stopping-traffic-the-busiest-nyc-subway-stops/

Train reviews:

Hoffman, Meredith February 22, 2013, DNAinfo reporter, producer.

http://www.dnainfo.com/new-york/20130222/greenpoint/g-train-receive-full-mta-service-review

Gridlock, Sam, January 8, 2012, New York Daily News

http://www.nydailynews.com/new-york/traffic/lexington-ave-4-5-6-lines-shut-overnight-grand-central-atlantic-ave-brooklyn-article-1.1002557